Findings and recommendations:

- Nature is our greatest teacher. It always offers numerous solutions and therefore we should listen carefully to it.
- The forest offers many working possibilities, which require specific knowledge and skills.
- For successful and sustainable forest management it is necessary to better connect theory with practice, theoretical schoolwork with fieldwork education. Such professional events are in demand and highly needed.
- In order to achieve sustainable development we should adjust our desires for profit to nature's actual possibilities.
- We all need to attend educational workshops, which in the future ensure smart decisions about nature interventions.
