Findings and recommendations

- The author's work is based on a world riven by conflicts between different social strata, their members and numerous interests. He is one of the first Slovene writers to draw attention to the structure of society.
- Möderndorfer expressed his view on contemporary paradoxes through lively discussion with a hint of humour.
- We often tend to take our troubles too seriously and so do not seem them for what they are.
- We should instead distance ourselves from life in order to see the "root" of the problem and solve it in a calmer and more rational way, which is also the main lesson of his stories.
- The book Brskanje (Searching Through), which the author presented for the first time, also adds a special touch to the event.
