Findings and recommendations

- Despite a number of measures aimed at increasing the employability of vulnerable groups (run by the Ministry of Labour, Family, Social Affairs and Equal Opportunities, and the Ministry of Education, Science and Sport), the development of basic skills remains unsystematic and unplanned.
- The development of basic skills in vulnerable groups is not to the standard required for employment.

As a result, we need to:

- understand the local environment and the situation of vulnerable groups;
 - improve the links between the education system and the labour market in the region;
 - establish new and more constructive partnerships between competent institutions in the region and encourage cooperation and the exchange of information among them;
 - develop clear strategies for developing basic skills in vulnerable groups to empower them and help them improve their position in society.
- Training for vulnerable groups focuses on the ability to recognise one's own competencies, activate and motivate the participants to plan their professional and personal future, and encourage them to improve their situation.
